E. S. GILL'S RECORD FINALLY COMES HOME TO ROOST

The Los Angeles Times of February 20 contains the following article about Honolulu's recent case of murderous assault from the pen of its editor, Brevet Major General Harrison Gray Otis, with special reference to the past record of the assailant:

"Gernallist" Edwin S. Gill has broken out in a new spot. A special dispatch to the Times from Honolulu, via San Francisco, published yesterday, told how Gill shot and wounded a reporter of a rival paper who asked Gill to desist from publishing uncomplimentary remarks about a party of young ladies temporarily sojourning at the Hawaiian capital.

Gill explained that he only meant to be humorous when he printed the objectionable articles. Reporter Stevens, who is described as a college athlete, could not see where the fun came in for the young ladies, so he proceeded to slap the editor's face. Then Gill opened fire with his pocket artillery, which it seems he had provided himself with in anticipation that somebody would try to lick him for the ungallant use he was making of the columns of the sheet over which he had supervision.

People in Los Angeles who remember Gill were not surprised to learn of the miscarriage of the joke he tried to perpetrate and of its almost tragic ending. Gill is a rash individual of the smart-aleck type who became afflicted with the delusion some years ago that he was destined to be a molder of thought. In other words, he fancied he was a "gernallist," and acting under that hallucination he has succeeded in making himself ridiculous in more communities than one.

About the time the lamented Los Angeles "Trombone" was on its last legs, "Gernallist" Gill appeared on the scene and tried to pump wind into the dying sheet. Gill proved even a worse hoodoo to the moribund "gernallist" than "Smoothy" Boyce himself, and the "Trombone" was soon laid to rest in the newspaper boneyard.

Gill next migrated to Phoenix, Ariz., where he essayed to show the natives how newspapers should be run. His style of literature did not meet with any more appreciation in the wild and woolly Territory than it did in Los Angeles, and it was not long before "Gernallist" Gill again had to seek pastures new. It is only a question of time when he will see his finish in Honolulu as he has everywhere else where he has tried to perch upon the editorial tripod. The quality of his humor is too coarse for even the kanakas to endure with patience for a very long time.

A PALE-FACE GIRL

may be almost safely set down

as wanting red in her blood.

If subject to dizziness, fainting,

shortness of breath on slight exertion, no doubt remains.

To want red in the blood is to fail of the good of one's food.

Her food is not nourishing her.

She needs a change.

The easiest change she can get, and one of the best, is

Scott's emulsion of cod-liver oil.

It gives her the upper hand

in the contest—her food has

the upper hand now—she is pale no more.

We'll send you a little to try, if you like.
